The novel opens with Aunt Polly searching the house in search of her nephew, Tom Sawyer. She finds him in the closet, discovers that his hands are covered with jam, and prepares to give him a whipping. Tom cries out theatrically, “Look behind you!” and when Aunt Polly turns, Tom escapes over the fence. After Tom is gone, Aunt Polly reflects matter-of-factly on Tom’s chicanery and how she lets him get away with too much.

Tom comes home at suppertime, famished and hot, and walks off for the kitchen to eat his dinner. When Aunt Polly sees him, she asks what he has about his adventures. During supper, Aunt Polly speculate about Tom’s future, and Tom promises that he will never be skipped school that afternoon and will maintain his reputation as a good boy. Meanwhile, Tom’s half-brother, Joe, is working in the yard. Tom sees him and thinks of the fun he can have with him. Tom’s cousin, Mark Twain, comes to visit and Tom invites him to go on a journey. Tom promises Mark Twain the adventure of his life.

When he returns home in the evening, Tom finds Aunt Polly waiting for him. She notices his dirty clothes and resolves to make him work the next day, a Saturday, as punishment.

On Saturday morning, Aunt Polly sends Tom out to whitenose the fence. Jim passes by, and Tom tries to get him to do some of the whitening in return for a “white alley,” a kind of mite. Jim almost agrees, but Aunt Polly appears and chases them off, leaving Tom alone with his tasks.
