The novel opens with Aunt Polly scrounging the house in search of her nephew, Tom Sawyer. She finds him in the closet, discovers that his hands are covered with jam, and prepares to give him a whipping. Tom cries out theatrically, “Look behind you!” and when Aunt Polly turns, Tom escapes over the fence. After Tom is gone, Aunt Polly reflects sadly on Tom’s mischief and how she lets him get away with too much.

Tom comes home at supper. The boys have all been diverted by a story Tom tells about his adventures. Dedicating supper, Aunt I was not supposed to be skipped school that afternoon and went elsewhere and then part of his coffee is still warm from the table and down at the pool that his half-brother, Ben, has left behind. Tom is dressed in his best clothes and Aunt Polly is satisfied. Tom and the other boys are shown to their quarters and eventually chase the newcomer all the way home.

When he returns home in the evening, Tom finds Aunt Polly waiting for him. She notices his dirty clothes and resolves to make him work the next day, a Saturday, as punishment.

On Saturday morning, Aunt Polly sends Tom out to whitewash the fence. Jim passes by, and Tom tries to get him to do some of the whitewashing in return for a “white alley,” a kind of subtitle. Jim almost agrees, but Aunt Polly appears and chases him off, leaving Tom alone with his chores.
